

News Release

Date: April 14rd, 2020

Late yesterday we were informed that one of our employees who works at our Flowery Branch, GA production facility was diagnosed with COVID-19. As a result, we have taken immediate action by quarantining this employee and those they came into contact with. We are ensuring that everyone affected is being properly cared for and fully compensated while at home.

In addition to taking the step to quarantine, we have also followed guidelines from the FDA and the CDC, as well as local health authorities to fully sanitize the affected areas of our facility before resuming safe production of the products that people need during this time of crisis.

These measures come on top of government and health authority recommended actions that we have already taken to prevent the spread of the disease in our communities, including requiring the wearing of masks, continuous cleaning with EPA approved cleaner known to kill COVID-19, and providing increased space in common lunch and break areas to allow for social distancing in those venues. In addition, we are now requiring temperature screening of employees upon entry to our facilities, and are in the process of erecting protective barriers where possible between employees whose jobs do not allow for full social distancing.

Providing the safest possible environment for our employees is our #1 priority. As our teams work to ensure safe production is a reality each day, we are confident in our ability to continue to serve our consumers, retailers and communities without any compromise to the safety or quality of our products.

We remain deeply grateful to our employees who continue to do amazing work in our facilities to make sure the country has the essential food products it needs.
